THE CHIEF JOHN D. COYLE FELLOWSHIP

THE NEW ENGLAND ASSOCIATION OF CHIEFS OF POLICE
IN PARTNERSHIP WITH ROGER WILLIAMS UNIVERSITY

*Serving the leaders of today,
while preparing the leaders of tomorrow
– educating law enforcement professionals regionally, nationally and internationally.*

The Justice System Training & Research Institute (JSTRI) at Roger Williams University is an internationally recognized center for professional police training.

The JSTRI combines current research, state-of-the-art technology and best practices to develop training programs for supervisors, mid-level managers and executives of police departments regionally, nationally and internationally.

Since 2004, the JSTRI has partnered with the New England Association of Chiefs of Police to train over 12,000 officials throughout the United States. Additionally, the Institute has trained officers from other countries around the world, including Turkey, Kyrgyzstan, the Bahamas and the Republic of Georgia.

The Institute also hosts regional and national conferences focused on issues of policing and national security. Additionally, it serves as a regional clearinghouse for criminal justice issues of critical importance.

The New England Association of Chiefs of Police proudly supports the Justice System Training & Research Institute and calls on all members and friends to help endow the Chief John D. Coyle Fellowship.

The Fellowship Endowment, once established, will support the work of the Institute by providing for a distinguished police professional – as a researcher and teacher – to support the delivery of relevant, contemporary police training and education.

Chief John D. Coyle

Chief John D. Coyle, the well-respected Executive Director of the New England Association of Chiefs of Police, has provided almost 50 years of public service (28 of those years as the Chief of Police in North Attleboro, MA).

Your support is critical!

With your tax deductible gift, you will be helping to ensure that the future of the policing profession remains strong, current and effective.
